Honekone, January 30th, 1873.

Elsewhere we give a very valuable memorandum-drawn-up-by-the Governor of Singapore, with reference to the suppression of Chinese riots. The instructions give evidence of a careful consideration of the subject and of an intimate acquaintance with its bearings and they are worthy of note as affording some hints which would be useful in Hongkong, should we unfortunately at any time be troubled in the same way as our neighbours at Singapore. There is no necessity. Admiral Fedorovski, of the kindness and courof course, for any alarm on this score at the present time, as on the whole the population of this Colony is orderly, but the circumstances attending the strike of the hawkers here, the excitement concerning the case in Registrar General's office, this afternoon. which a Chinaman's "second wife" was recently charged with larceny, and many other similar incidents, are sufficient to show that there might be occasions when vigorous

The Governor of Singapore goes upon the golden principle of laying down the policy of doing all that is reasonable to avert a disturbance, but that "when a riot does occurit cannot be dealt with in too summary a Petersburg and London shows that no im- keeper, charged accolie named Kwong-a-ho, bemanner," and that " whilst the superior offi- portant difference of opinion exists. cers should not relax their efforts to remove its cause, whether arising from quarrels was previously so moderate. character. There is, however, one point connected with this which ought not to be overlooked. It is a favourite trick among the Chinese to threaten a disturbance with the express and it becomes a very nice question how fur the Government of a Colony should at any time allow itself to be swayed by considerations of this kind. It is quite true, as Sir

HARRY ORD sets forth in his memorandum, that the Chinese lower classes are, if left to themselves, not difficult to deal with, but unfortunately there are always a number of men, such as the Samsangs, who exert a great sway over them, and are likely to urge them on to unruly conduct. It requires.

AFRICAN FEVER. The following account of the health of Sierra Leone is given in the Lancet. It would seem to be a capital field for medical men, but for the fact that if twenty per cent, of their patients die in a year, they are likely before long to have none left:-Recent mails from the West Coast of Africa have brought intelligence of the deaths of the Queen'd Advocate and the French consul at cver they have required; including, for the cure his being informed of any differences Sierra Leone from fever, and many of the officences of the complainant called his three witnesses, disaffected Mahomedans, rifles, ammunition, and arising between the Kungsees which were likely and the complainant called his three witnesses, disaffected Mahomedans, rifles, ammunition, and arising between the Kungsees which were likely and the complete and the French consultation and arising between the Kungsees which were likely and the complete and the reach consultation are invalidated. in this country. Out of a European population of 98 at Sierra Leone, over 20 have died since January-a ratio of upwards of 200 per 1000. The climate is, in fact, so deadly to Europeans, that it is surprising that any eau be found to encounter the risk of serving there. In order to obtain volunteers for the Army Medical Service of the West Coast of Africa, the authorities have long had to offer additional advantages to medical officers. Not withstanding that these officers are entitled to a year's leave in this country for every year spent in the African climate, the lives of a great many of them are excrificed by the service. The medical are not, of course, by any means the only officers who suffer, and we doubt not that if the medicul records of the army were examined a somewhat startling story could be told of the loss of health and life that African service has occasioned. Those who have once contracted these fevers seldom altogether recover their health. If they manage to escape atructural disease of the liver, spleen, or other organs, their susceptibility to relapses of fever remains, and many a strong and hearty young fellow has been tempted to go out to these wretched climates only to return a wreck of his former seif. We have always advocated the fallest possible employment of natives, and we are glad to notice that Lord Kimberley has adopted this policy. IMPORTANT INSURANCE CASE.

A JAPANESE SKETCH OF SHEFFIELD The Sheffield Independent publishes a "careful translation" of a letter written by an altaché of the Japanese Embassy, the chief membors of which recently visited Sheffleld, and were present at the Cutlers' Feast. The document is a most extraordinary one, as will be seen from the following extracts: From -, in the train of Shonia Tomomi Imakura, Ambassador in England. tohis father, in Miako, Dai Niphon-I am mindful, oh! my father, of the command laid upon me to send you a careful acsecount of my wanderings in this island; which is think it too great for his sole dominion: impressions, I am incapable of generalizing the before you compactly. I shall, therefore, de- were disallowed. The General remoustrates scribe what I saw in one city in which manufactures are carried on in every strest and, as it accomed to me, in every house. . . You had died commanding a regiment. have been to Chosaka, our rich commercial centre, and doubtless remember its opulent merchants, skilful artisans, comfortable labourers, alean streets, well-built houses, and spleudid temples. The English city of which I would aneak is richer than Ohosaka and as populous; the comparison ends here. Its name is Sheffield, and we reached it late in the evening, after a weary journey in one of the wonderfu machines of which you have heard, and which

The women are ugly beyond my dreams. Oh, my father, conceive a creature who walks on her feet! Impossible! you will say. Yet have I seen the wives and daughters of the English in this city of Sheffield perform this horrid wonder. And my amazoment beightened into disgust when I found that the practice was common; and that, while in our country the ladies are most sedulous to prevent the growth or expansion of the feet, these strange people take no thought of the matter, and sllow the toes to enlarge without let or hindrance. The first lady into whose presence I was brought bestowed upon me a welcoming amile, and in doing this her lips wer parted, and her mouth was revealed. Oh agony I could have fainted as I beheld an even row small teeth, the colour of which was a beastly white. Even the gums were not dyed our beautiful black, and not a single tooth had been broken—though how female loveliness can be supposed complete with a natural set is more than my brain can imagine. Alas! I ceased to wonder when I bad seen English women more frequently; they are heaps of flesh, blood, and bone, without shape or form-creatures on whom the hand of Ka-tha-pa, the avenging god, has been laid in anger. Will you believe it, my father, the eyebrows are allowed to remain even when the maiden becomes mature; the lips are of a sickening red, instead of being of the golden bue peculiar to the beautifu damaels of Minko, And the countenance and complexion! How shall I ank you to credit me when I say that the one is sharp and point. ed and the other white, except in rare instances? Our own women love to give grace and expression to their faces by painting them a gorgeous red, and depicting on the cheeks some pretty device of a bird or a fish. But English women when they paint—and only a few are polished! enough to do so-lack taste and skill to increase their attractions; it is like putting a laced sleeve on one arm and a ragged one on the other—the poverty of the last overshadows the richness of the first. . . A rich feast was given during our stay by the merchants of the city.

and we must needs gratify the hospitable Daimio by attending. Head of Confucius, was there ever a scene of such cating and drinking! -such noise, rattle, and talk! Had a feast so borrid been held in liako, the guests, O Lmy father, would have been thought mad, and the hosts madder still. In the place of our temperate dish of tes and light platter of fish or rice, there rose huge mounds of the flesh of filthy beasts which sent forth a sickening smell, but which these wonderful people ate in ncalculable quantities. And as they ate so did they drink-not the aski of our prudent banquets, but coloured water containing the essence of stupelying drugs, which they swallowed in huge draughts, as though their thirst could never be quenched. This island interests me; its people are problems and I would solve them. Magnificent abroad, they are insignificant at home; they are brave yet timorous, hospitable yet rude and discourteous, benevolent vet barah and cruel, and-wildest puradox of all-Christians, yet -good men-Furewell!

OFFICIAL ECONOMY (To the Editor of the "Times.") Sir,-The following case has just been brought to my notice :--About six months ago an officer (there is no need to mention his name) died at the boadquarters of the regiment which he had commanded for 13 years. He had done his share of work in the Orimen and in India during the Mutiny, and had altogether served his country for 33 years. The regiment, anxious to show that respect for the body of their late chief which they had all felt for him during his lifetime, applied to the General commanding so small that a prince of our empire would not the district for four Control horses to draw his body to the grave. The application was Confused as my mind is by the influx of hasty at once granted. penditure could not be allowed, and ordered he General to recover the sum of £4 10s. from the effects of the deceased officer. Although it makes no difference in the way in which such an act will be viewed, at least by the Army, I cannot refrain from mentioning that the country saves about $1,000 by the death of this officer. I admit that a General Officer ought to know FriHE Property of the Officers, 80th Regiment, should at least be aware that be is serving a to warre in first rate condition, with spare country too poor and too practical to waste cloth (new.) stands, ones, lamps, &c., parted money on sentiment over a lump of lifeless clay; but strely, in common deceney, the item bushed to the Barracks. might bave been passed this time, and a War-Office circular issued afterwards forbidding General Officers in future to show any mark of respect to the bodies of officers who may die in command of one of Her Majesty's regiments. WELCOME TO RAIN. Drip, drip, drip, falls the rain-The beautiful, life-giving rain-It sparkles in diamonds It joins with the brook And goes rippling away Through meadow, and valley, and plain, "Till morged in the Ocean's blue main.

Drip, drip, drip, in the dust, Comes Nature's beneficent trust; Alike on the parson Returning from church, Alike on the beggar Who stands at the porch, And asks for a morsel of crust: It falleth on "just and unjust."

Drip, drip, drip, it comes down, Rejoicing the country and town; The farmer sees in it Broad scree of grain, The merchant is silently Counting his gain; In nature there is not a frown, For green is surplanting the brown. Drip, drip, drip, now it pours!

Submerging all things out of doors, The cup of the lily-Is full to the brim, The owl in the tree-top Sits enlien and grim, As it hears the wind wake; now it sours In solemn, lugubrious roars. While drip, drip, falls the rain-

The joyous, frolicsome rain-•It sports with the diamonds - That-hang on the spray;-It kisses the stream And goes laughing away; Now flattered, bewildered, and vain, Coquetting with all in its train. Drip, drip, drip; now 'tis plain. Convivial, turbulent rain Is lost to decorum; Borne on by the flood, It waltzes in eddies,

It trails in the mud.

Things were not likely to go better. I thought, as I saw the great writer-kindest as well as wisest of men, but not very patient under sentimental philosophies-seated next the good Mrs. Tagart, who soon was heard launching at him various metaphysical questions in regard to heaven and such like; and the relief was great when Thackeray introduced, with quaint whimsicality, a story which he and I had heard Macready relate in talking to us about his boyish days, of a country actor who had supported himself for six months on his judicious treatment of the "tag" to the 'Castle Spectre." In the original it stands that you are to do away with suspicion, banish vile mistrust, and, almost in the words we had just heard from the minister to the philosopher, "Believe there is a heaven, nor doubt that heaven is just!" in place of which Macready's friend, observing that the drop fell for the most part quite coldly, substituted one night the more telling appeal, "And give us your applause, for that is always 'just "" which brought down the house with rapture. - From " The Life of Charles Dickens," by John Farster:

THE LOBSTER

When a lobster shakes hands with you, you always know when it takes hold, and is exceedingly pleased when it gets done. They have small features, and lay no claims to good looks. When they locomote, they resemble a small boy shuffling off in his father's boots. They are backward, very. They even go ahead backward.
